QUOTH THE SENIORS, "NEVERMORE"

'Twas upon a day immortal that we stumbled through this portal,
As we prayed for power to withstand the upper classmen's roar.
While in fumbling desperation, we surveyed the situation,
We concluded that our plight to ease would be a year-long chore.
Suddenly there came a jeering, as of someone gaily leering,
"Look, the Freshmen!" someone howled, sneering through our home-room door.
That was all, but then came more!

How distinctly I remember February to December.
'Farty-seven was the first and worst of the succeeding four.
If we dared to make a blunder, Mr. Weber's voice would thunder,
"You're so small, it's little wonder!" which would hurt us to the core.
Pride upsurging, tears emerging, while each face our wishes wore.
"Oh, to be a Sophomore!"

Soon our hero-worship faded as The Kingdom we invaded.
Freshmen humbleness we traded; Soph'more confidence we gained.
As we girls discovered dating, every evening found us waiting
For the call that meant our roting was secure. Else sorrow reigned.
Life depending, some impending, while indiff'rence each one feigned.
"Adolescence!" Freud explained.

Then returned the full-day session, followed by morale depression.
Just to give you an impression, here's an average Buchtel day:
(Yawn) "Good morning, Mr. Schneyer. Missed the bus." aaaaa what a liar!
"Fell into some muck and mire!" still another one might say.
"I fell sick!" (an ancient trick), "so, can I be excused today?"
Honesty had gone astray!

Now that Senior Year is ending and our graduation pending,
All our ways we would be mending, but we find it's much too late.
So, in open meditation we present this supplication
To the future generation: (May they heed the words we state).

"Modesty of Freshman year
Is worth it's weight in gold.
Honesty and hearts sincere
Are priceless, we are told.

Thoughts of wisdom, often panned
Are jewels, very rare.
Put them all together and
You'll be a millionaire!"

CLASS PROPHECY

CLASS WILL

As I sit here in my tent peering into my Crystal ball, a vision comes before me of the January 1951 class of John R. Buchtel high school.

Ah! What's this I see? It's the year 1960, and Ruth Kerns, who has just made her debut into society, is stepping out of her diamond studded limousine, about to enter the Majestic Theatre. The play, "The Human Mess" written by that eminent author, James "Shakespeare" Schultz is being given tonight. Co-starring with Cynthia "Carnell" Lawrence is Dave "Barrymore" Blank.

Naticing several flashbulb explosions, I look to see who is taking pictures. It is none other than Dick McCreary, "Times" photographer. Near him is the famous theatre critic, Norma Messner, who is contemplating the success of the play.

Coming down the aisle, I see that wonderful set designer far, "The Human Mess," Robert "Angelo" Floreani. Following him to their orchestra seats are the noted sports announcer Dick "Stern" Bazley, and that outstanding Olympic star, Richard Anderson.

Now that the play is over, two of the stage crew hands, Jim Trithart, electrician, and Eugene Fredericks, curtain puller, are leaving to attend a party being held at the spacious fifty two room mansion of Esther "Edus" Rabinowitz on Park Avenue.

In the Ekus-Rabinowitz home, I see in one room those two famous racketeers, John "The Greek" Economou, and Ed, "Babyface" Conrad, playing poker against the only hobo to make a million dollars, Al, "Money" Simon.

In another room, I see the famous producer Marilyn Frye, the only one of her kind, eagerly watching a show put on by Dick Friend's Stark Club entertainers. Bettie Adamson, who does a bubble dance with a transparent bubble, and Pat "Rand" Spring, famous for her fan dance, will be featured. The master of ceremonies is that vivacious comedienne, Shirlee Katanic. Also watching this spectacle are Eddie, "Master Mind" Kalail, and his own physician, Dr. Eugene Sawan, M. D. Dr. Sawan performed the operation that restored Eddie's brain to normal (almost). Eddie's mind cracked after he and his gang blew up Fort Knox to print their own type of money. Standing nearby is Grace "Nightingale" Chaff with her first aid kit. She thinks Eddie might collapse again, (poor girl).

Diane Haberman, that incomparable school teacher, and Joyce Raynes, head secretary in the United Nations are comparing notes with a beautiful Powers model, Dawn Craycraft, about the play seen earlier this evening.

At this moment, things are getting dim, as if a curtain is being brought down—ah! yes—it is—bringing with it the end of a great and unforgettable evening.

1. I, Al Simon, leave my ability to wreck a new car to any fool who is dumb enough to get too close to the car in front of him.
2. I, Eddie Kalail, will my bookie syndicate to whoever is willing to take the risk.
3. I, Jim Trithart, leave my ability to get through school in four years to Danny Woodson.
4. I, Pat Spring, leave my ability to wander around the halls and get away with it to Porter Godard.
5. I, Eugene Sawan, leave my lock and locker to anyone who has a dollar.
6. I, Shirley Katanic, leave my shy, quiet manner to Eugene Marnelos.
7. I, Bob Floreani, leave all my J-E-R-N-T-S for Dick Kipp to take over; and to Leo Fouche, I leave all my women.
8. I, Ed Conrad, will my afternoon nap to Sleepy.
9. I, John Economou, will my technique of getting in to trouble to Duke Stump.
10. I, Bettie Adamson, will my ability to get along with all the boys to Val Crislip.
11. I, Dick Anderson, will my ability to swim backwards underwater while eating an apple to Dennis O'Brian.
12. I, Dave Blank, will my ability to evade bill collectors to Bob Davis.
13. I, Dick Bazley, will my ability to hem toothpicks to Mr. Shaffer.
14. I, Esther Rabinowitz, leave my ability to find a good
15. I, Marilyn Frye, bequeath my driving ability to Marlene Dark, who'll need it in the future.
16. I, Grace Chaff, leave my perfect attendance these four years to my sister Ruth. She leaves Jim M. too.
17. I, Joyce Raynes, leave my 7:00 o'clock alarm to my brother Howard.
18. I, Cynthia Lawrence, leave my ability to graduate a half a year ahead of time to Ruby Tresser and "Sis"
19. I, Norma Messner, leave my seat on the second floor steps during the 5th lunch period to Alice Boss.
20. I, Ruth Kerns, will my Tuesday afternoon jaunt downtown to Ann Johnson.
21. I, Dick McCreary, will my place in the Tripel-alance.
22. I, Eugene Fredericks, will my shyness to Tom Bentz, who could use a little of it.
23. I, Dawn Craycraft, will my ability to like one boy for four years to Valeria Harris.
24. I, Diane Haberman, leave my place on the Senior Griffin Staff.
25. I, Dick Friend, leave my seat in the library to Myer Slousky, who really needs two of them.
26. I, Jim Schulz, leave my charming ways to anyone who wishes to follow in my tracks.
